

Sometimes the YL2W competition becomes hard to judge. You head into some weekends confident of who you think is going to win but then all of a sudden, an upset occurs. As we head into the last couple of rounds, we may see some changes to the ladder, especially if these random upsets continue to occur. And as we look ahead to this rounds games, we have a sneaking suspicion that we are going to be in for some more.

We are beginning to feel that we are watching the Warriors fall into a bit of a slump. They have had 2 rounds now where they have dropped games that should have been comfortable wins for them and as we head into round 16, we are a little unsure as to whether they will get over the line against the Suns. On paper, the Warriors should be the favourites. They are 4th, more than likely to play finals and they are coming up against the 8th placed Suns. But the Suns have 2 very critical players in Woods and Jones and the two of them make a big difference in any game. We think the Warriors have their work cut out for them in this match but we hope for their sake they can change this. As looking ahead to their run home, this may be their last chance at a win.

The Breakers are a side that are hopeful of a finals spot and while there are a couple of rounds to go, they need a few things to go their way. First of all they need to be winning their own games and secondly they are unfortunately hoping the Warriors crumble. But onto what they have control over, their own games. They take on the Jets this weekend in what is going to be a tough match. This Jets side are sitting pretty comfortable in that number 1 spot and as they head into this weekend with a 7 game winning streak, they will be feeling unbeatable.

The Vikings are in a great position to finish their season off strong and it begins with a round 16 meeting with the Pacers. But as for the Pacers themselves, this marks the beginning of a number of tough games ahead. But as we always like to say, we hope they can remain competitive. This Vikings side is in a great tussle with the Cavs at the moment, both vying for that 2nd placing. But while the Vikings hold this position currently, they are not safe.

The team that seems to be the instigator of a number of these upsets happens to be the Steelers. They are coming off a great win over the Warriors and as they head into this weekend with 2 games ahead of them, we wonder what damage they could do. But in saying this, they take on a couple of pretty good sides. Starting off with their Saturday opponent, the Sharks are also having their time in the spotlight, coming off a win against the Cavs. This makes for an even more exciting match between these two. Who is going to be the team to extend their current form?

Then on the Sunday, the Steelers come up against the Cavs. And seeing as we've mentioned the Cavs loss last week, this could be a great opportunity for the Steelers to grab a win while a team is down. But the Cavs have their own goals in this competition and they want to make sure they give themselves the best shot when finals come around. They need to make sure they are winning games like this.
