

The Paky Warriors are up for another double weekend meaning it's double the chance of propelling themselves even further ahead in this competition. First team off the block will be the Eagles. Now back in round 3, the Warriors were stunned with a 1 point loss. But with the tables turned and the Warriors in control with home court advantage, they are certainly going to redeem themselves. This Warriors side has come leaps and bounds in the last few weeks, securing themselves as the number 1 team to beat. And with only a few more rounds left in the competition, their second half will be proof that this is the case. A loss this weekend for the Eagles may force them to lose touch with the top 6, but we are sure this won't last long.

Second team on the chopping block is the Cougars. Back in round 1, the Warriors made easy work of the Cougars and unfortunately, this weekend will follow a similar pattern. The Cougars have had glimpses of greatness, in particular their win against the All Stars, but their consistency is what lets them down. We are hopeful they can remain competitive in this game but if they give the Warriors too much space, they will only take advantage of it.

One game in line this weekend to be crowned as game of the round will be the match-up between the Cavs and the Maccabi Warriors. These two sides have been real fighters in this competition and with only 6 points separating the two in their first meeting, it is going to be another close one. It is really hard to tip a winner in this match as both have had similar lead ups and both have had their ups and downs. Like we said, this will be a close one and the team that's wants it the most will be the team that is victorious.

The Warriors are up for another game this weekend, a Sunday clash against the Thoroughbreds. The Thoroughbreds 9th placing does not reflect their season thus far. Yes, their number of losses outweighs the number of wins, but they have given a number of high placed teams a run for their money. Back in round 4, these two met for the first time, the Thoroughbreds taking a comfortable victory. Will the Thoroughbreds make it 2 from 2, or will the Warriors even up the scores?

Before contending for the above game, the Thoroughbreds have a Saturday night clash against the Seahawks. 10 games down and 0 wins to their name, the Seahawks will be an easy start to the Thoroughbreds weekend. But with neither team meeting the other thus far, you never know how they might match up. Could this turn out to be the Seahawks first win for the season? There is always a chance, but they will need to put together a tight 4 quarter performance in order to do so.

A team that has found themselves in a bit of a rough patch lately is the All Stars. This team started this season off so strong but have come a little unstuck in recent weeks. This weekend sees them take on the Steelers and it could turn out to be a danger game for them. Although the All Stars were comfortable victors in round 5, a lot has changed since then. The Steelers, up until only recently, were on a 4 game winning streak and for them to grab a win here would be a great notch on their belts.

The final two teams to close out round 9 are the Breakers and the Gulls. This Breakers side is coming off a great 1 point win over the Cavs and they will be heading into this game with a whole lot of confidence. A win here for the Breakers will keep them in touch with the top 6 so this game becomes an important one for them. As for the Gulls, they have gone through a bit of everything. Some close wins, close loses but also some hefty ones. They are likely to be the 2nd placed team at the conclusion of this match but hopefully it is by small margin.

Pakenham vs Craigieburn

Sat 5pm

Cardinia Life

Casey vs. Maccabi

Sat 6pm

Casey Indoor Leisure Centre

Melton vs. Warrnambool

Sat 6pm

Melton Indoor Recreation Centre

Collingwood vs. Western Port

Sun 12pm

Collingwood College

Keysborough vs. Pakenham

Sun 12pm

Rowville Secondary College

Maccabi vs. Melton

Sun 2pm

Bialik Stadium

Mornington vs. Chelsea

Sun 2pm

Mornington Civic Reserve

/BIGVBASKETBALL

@BIGV_BALL

@BIGV_BALL

@BBALLVIC

B I G V . C O M . A U