

After a shock loss last week, the Jets will be looking to jump straight back onto the winners list when they meet with the Suns on Saturday night. It was back in round 4 when these two met for the first time this season, and on that occasion it was the Jets who took home the victory. Going on current performances of both sides plus their positions on the ladder, you can't go past the Jets in making it 2 from 2. The Suns will unfortunately draw the short end of the stick and be struck with another loss to add to their already 3 straight streak.

The Pacers can't seem to catch a break. They come ever so close to a number of teams only to fall short and take another loss. This weekend will be a tough one for them, taking on the Steelers on the Saturday followed by the Warriors on the Sunday. Out of the two, we believe the Pacers will have more luck with the Steelers. This is of course due to their first meeting in round 1 where the Pacers took a 10 point win. And on top of this, both sides are not that far apart on the ladder side of things. But in saying this, the Steelers are coming off a win whereas the Pacers have not had one since that round 1 meeting. This is a game that could go either way, but the Steelers have the slight edge.

Onto their second game for the weekend and the Warriors will once again show their strength. Currently sitting in 3rd, 3 straight wins to their name plus a 21 point win in their first meeting, you can't tip against them. This win will help the Warriors cause in keeping a close grip on the top bunch of teams as it is wins like this that make the difference. On top of this, the game the night before for the Pacers will only play into the hands of the Warriors but for the Pacers sake, we hope they can get game number one.

Our ladder leaders the Cavs are another team contending with two games this weekend and if their current form is anything to go by, we think they will go just fine. With the Sharks on the Saturday and the Breakers on the Sunday, the 5th and 6th placed teams will be prove to be no threat. The Cavs in their first meeting with the Sharks, helped them to their lowest score of 22 points. It must be mentioned that we are glad to have not seen this from the Sharks since then. But with this being said, it only shows that the Cavs will get the job done once again.

Onto the Breakers, well this might be a nervous one for the Cavs. Although the Cavs are already one up on the Breakers, that win was not a convincing one. Only 3 points separated the two. And to go with that, that game was only played in round 5 which was not that long ago. The Cavs have held onto an incredible 8 game winning streak and we would hate to see that go. But we feel the Breakers were too close in the first match up to not give them half a chance second time around.

Casey vs. Southern Pen

Sat 4pm

Casey Indoor Leisure Centre

Sherbrooke vs. Sunbury

Sat 6pm

Belgrave Heights Christian School

Whittlesea vs. Western Port

Sat 6.30pm

Mill Park Basketball Stadium

Mornington vs. Casey

Sun 12pm

Mornington Civic Reserve

Pakenham vs. Whittlesea

Sun 2pm

Cardinia Life

/BIGVBASKETBALL

@BIGV_BALL

@BIGV_BALL

@BBALLVIC